FISH STORY WORTH WHILE

Solomon Brown Has
Had One Real
Experience

Editor Evening Bulletin: I read with great interest the shark adventure of Chas. A. Reeves. I now wish to relate a somewhat similar experience I had in the same locality a few years ago.

One fine morning, having nothing particular to do, I rented a boat and, taking my best fishing tackle, pulled well outside of the reef, with the hope of securing a few fat salmon. It being well known to all the fishermen here that when the salmon frequent these shores they come in large quantities and are in the prime of condition. When about half a mile Ewa of James Castle's seaside residence I got my lines ready, but my attention was attracted by a commotion in the water some four to five hundred yards Waikeiki from my boat.

The day previous, I may remark, a school of Right Whales had passed Diamond Head traveling slowly to the westward, as is their custom at certain seasons of the year. It happens sometimes that a straggler will become detached from the school, and in the endeavor to regain his comrades travels with great velocity in various directions. Now I do not think that I am by nature timid or quickly rattled, but in the interest of truth I must say I felt "disconnected" when I found that the commotion referred to was caused by a Left Whale—one that had strayed from its companions, and was approaching my boat with terrific rapidity. When about seventy feet from my small craft he leaped clear of the water and passing some twenty-five feet above my boat, plunged into the sea about one hundred feet from me. After proceeding some distance he turned and again with a rush repeated his performance, and much to my relief, he disappeared during his second arc-like feat, leaving me feeling more composed.

I was able to recognize him as a large specimen of the species "Balena mysticetus," the same which I am told frequents the St. Lawrence river in search of cod, which it relentlessly chases to Niagara Falls, and, salmonlike, leaps the falls in pursuit of its favorite food. The spectacle of a whale "leaping the falls" is said by those who have witnessed it, to be not only wonderful but extremely interesting.

Without a solitary fish, I returned to the shore thankful indeed that I escaped with my life, and was spared to truthfully tell the experience I had on that eventful day. I am sure many who read this will join me in sincere regrets that many of the fish stories published, if not absolutely untrue, are certainly greatly exaggerated, and writers of these sea adventures should bear in mind that truth should be strictly adhered to, for often it is stranger than fiction.

Yours,
SOLOMON F. BROWN.

GEO. FAIRCHILD RETURNS $50

Fleet Entertainers Meet
Making Final
Plans

Keala, Kauai, July 15, 1938.
P. L. Waldron, Esq., Chairman Sub-Committee, Fleet Entertainment.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find $50 payment for 10 ball tickets, which you sent me to dispose of for your account. As there is no demand for them here, the Makee Sugar Co. has bought them as their donation to the entertainment of the American Fleet.

Yours truly,
GEORGE FAIRCHILD.

This letter, read at the meeting of the Entertainment Committee this morning, caused much pleasure. On motion of J. O. Luttet, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed for Mr. Fairchild and the Makee Sugar Company.

Wm. H. Hoogs reported progress in ball affairs. The question of how to extend invitations to the officers of the Fleet was discussed, and as a result a committee, consisting of P. L. Waldron, Abram Lewis, Jr., and H. D. Bowen, was appointed to go aboard the flagship Connecticut and ascertain from the Chief of Staff the desired arrangements for the ball and Pearl Harbor trip. In this regard the committee decided that instead of inviting reporters from the three daily newspapers, only the editors be invited to the Pearl Harbor trip. In case they cannot attend personally they can send someone on their behalf. Invitations to Editors Wallace R. Farrington of the Bulletin, Halter G. Smith of the Advertiser, and George Henshall of the Star will be extended to go down to Pearl Harbor.

Chairman Waldron reported orally that Dr. Mitamura will turn in $50 for the ball tickets he had sold.

Shortly after the adjournment of the Entertainment Committee the Pearl Harbor Trip Committee met and approved the names of those selected to go down to Pearl Harbor, together with the officers of the Fleet. Mr. Van Valkenburg, who has charge of the lunch tables and benches, stated that there would be about 250 people on the list. He would not, however, give out the names for publication.

It is expected that the Ball Committee will meet on the grounds of the Moana and Seaside Hotels to make final plans for the ball some time today.

The Entertainment Committee will reconvene tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock.
